

American Academic

Contributors

PAUL JUDE BEAUVAIS is the editor of this issue of American Academic. A first-generation college student and a graduate of a community college, Paul earned his associate's, bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees at public institutions in Massachusetts, Louisiana, and Michigan. Since 2000 he has served as coordinator of first-year composition at Salem State College, where he is an associate professor of English.

JENNIFER ENGLE is a research analyst with The Pell Institute for the Study of Opportunity in Higher Education, which conducts research on college access and success for low-income, first-generation, and disabled college students. Jennifer received her PhD in Education from American University in 2004.

DAVID FABIENKE is a research manager at the Tomás Rivera Policy Institute. Mr. Fabienke received his MPP at the University of Southern California's School of Policy, Planning, and Development in 2005 and his BA in Political Science-Comparative Politics from the University of California-San Diego in 2001.

JENNIFER L. FRUM is a public service faculty member at the University of Georgia where she develops international projects and implements outreach programs targeted to Georgia's Latino community. She received a master's degree in Political Science from George Washington University and an undergraduate degree from West Virginia University. She is pursuing a PhD at UGA's Institute of Higher Education.

DANIEL GEORGIANNA is Chancellor Professor of Economics at the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth, where he has taught for 30 years. He is President of the UMass Faculty Federation Local 1895, American Federation of Teachers (AFT), AFL-CIO, which represents faculty and professional staff at UMass Dartmouth and a member of the Higher Education Program and Policy Council of the AFT.

BRIAN E. HARPER is an assistant professor in the Department of Curriculum and Foundations at Cleveland State University. A former classroom teacher in the Philadelphia, PA public school district, Dr. Harper completed his doctoral work at The Ohio State University in Educational Psychology. His research interests include African American racial identity development and motivation, particularly as it applies to students of color in urban settings.

ROBERT T. JONES is an associate professor and Chairman of the Economics department at the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth. His main areas of research are state and local public finance and government policy related to access to healthcare.

KEVIN M. KNIFFIN serves as staff representative for AFT-Wisconsin's Higher Education Council, which represents faculty and academic staff across the University of Wisconsin System. Kniffin earned his PhD in Anthropology and maintains a variety of research interests.

KRISTAN M. VENEGAS is an assistant professor in the College of Education at the University of Nevada, Reno. Dr. Venegas's research areas include postsecondary access and financial aid for low-income students of color.

MARIA ESTELA ZARATE is a senior research associate at the Tomás Rivera Policy Institute, where she directs educational policy research. Dr. Zarate received her PhD from UCLA's Graduate School of Education and Information Science.