

American Academic

Contributors

LEZLI BASKERVILLE is the fifth and first female President and CEO of the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education (NAFEO). She is a seasoned lawyer, government relations and equity professional who is a recognized expert on equal educational and employment opportunity, education access, affirmative action and diversity issues. She is published in the field. Dr. Baskerville received a bachelor's degree from Douglass College, Rutgers University, a JD degree from Howard University School of Law, and an Honorary Doctorate of Laws from Benedict College. She is also a graduate of the Executive Management Program for Minority Directors at Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Business.

LANITRA BERGER is a senior manager of research and policy at NAFEO, where she promotes international education on historically and predominantly black college campuses. She received her bachelor's degree in international relations and art history from Stanford University and will finish her Ph.D. in art history from Duke University in 2008.

CAROLE J. BLAND, Ph.D. is Assistant Dean for Faculty and Leadership Development in the Medical School, Professor in the Department of Family Medicine and Community Health, and member of the Department of Educational Policy and Administration, all at the University of Minnesota. She has over 100 publications, which focus on the development and productivity of faculty, administrators, and institutions. She received a master's degree in experimental psychology and a specialist degree in behavior modification from Drake University and a Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota in educational psychology with an emphasis on measurement, evaluation, and adult learning.

CATHERINE HILL is the Director of Research at the American Association of University Women Educational Foundation where she focuses on higher education and women's economic security. Previously, Dr. Hill was a Study Director at the Institute for Women's Policy Research and a professor at the University of Virginia. She is an author of several AAUW reports including Behind the Pay Gap (2007), Drawing the Line: Sexual Harassment on Campus (2006), Public Perceptions of the Pay Gap (2005) and Tenure Denied: Cases of Sex Discrimination in Academia (2004). She has also published on economic issues facing older women. She has a bachelor and master's degree from Cornell University and a Ph.D. in public policy from Rutgers University.

SARA D. KNAPP retired after 35 years as a librarian at the State University at Albany. She chaired the Disability Rights and Concerns committee of the Albany Chapter of her union, United University Professions (UUP.) She also served on the state UUP Committee on Disability Rights and Concerns and chaired the UUP Committee on Human & Civil Rights. She is the author of Disability Access at SUNY Campuses: 10 Years after the ADA. A Report from United University Professions' Disability Rights and Concerns Committee. 2004. <http://www.uupinfo.org/reports/disability.pdf>

WALTER BENN MICHAELS is a professor of English at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He is the author of The Trouble With Diversity, Our America and The Shape of the Signifier (2006). He has contributed to The New York Times Magazine and The Boston Globe.

DERRYN MOTEN is an associate professor of humanities at Alabama State University. He also serves as co-president of the AFT Faculty-Staff Alliance at the University. He holds a master's degree and a Ph.D. in American Studies from the University of Iowa. A member of the AFT higher education program and policy council, Dr. Moten assisted in the preparation of articles for this issue of American Academic.

PATRICIA A. MULCAHY is the Associate Dean for Academic Administration at the University of Minnesota Medical School. She serves as a coordinator, facilitator, and negotiator advancing the strategic priorities of the school.

DONNA L. NORTON is Senior Counsel for the Center for WorkLife Law at UC Hastings College of the Law. She has worked extensively on issues of work/family issues and violence against women. She is also a founding member of MomsRising, a national online grassroots movement working to build a family-friendly America.

MARGARET W. SALLEE is a doctoral candidate and Research Assistant in the Center for Higher Education Policy Analysis at the University of Southern California. Her research focuses on colleges and universities as organizations and graduate student socialization.

S. LYNN SCHOLLEN is a Ph.D. student of higher education policy and administration and a research assistant in the Postsecondary Education Research Institute at the University of Minnesota. Her research interests include faculty mentoring, organizational climate, and the intersection of perceived leadership and identity.

LIONEL SMITH currently serves as the Research Assistant within the Research & Policy division of NAFEO. He originally hails from Buffalo, New York. Lionel completed his undergraduate studies at Cleveland State University, where he received his bachelor's degree in urban services administration. For his graduate work, he attended the University of California, Irvine, where he earned his master's degree in social sciences with a concentration in demographic and social analysis. He has been a staff member at NAFEO since January 2007.

STEPHANIE COX SUÁREZ, PHD, is an associate professor in the Special Education Department at Wheelock College in Boston. A first-generation college student, Dr. Cox Suarez completed her doctoral work at Boston College and recently received tenure at Wheelock College. As a teacher educator, her two research interests include antiracist educational practice and the use of Reggio-inspired documentation to make visible the learning of children and adults.

DR. ANNE L. TAYLOR is Vice Dean for Academic Affairs at Columbia University, College of Physicians and Surgeons. Her medical research interests are cardiovascular disease in women and minorities, while her work in faculty affairs is focused on faculty career development. Dr. Taylor received her bachelor's degree from Hofstra University and completed medical school, internal medicine residency, and a clinical cardiology fellowship at the University of Chicago, with cardiovascular research training at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Iowa.

WILLIAM G. TIERNEY is University Professor and Wilbur-Kieffer Professor of Higher Education and Director of the Center for Higher Education Policy Analysis at the University of Southern California. His work pertains to access, equity, governance and decision-making in higher education. Dr. Tierney received his bachelor's degree from Tufts University, his master's degree in education from Harvard University, and his master's degree in anthropology and Ph.D. in administration and policy analysis from Stanford University.

SARAH WARBELOW is an affiliated professor with Georgetown University and George Washington University where she focuses on civil rights, higher education, and women in public policy. Previously, Warbelow was the Program Manager for the American Association of University Women Legal Advocacy Fund and an instructor at the University of Michigan. She earned her bachelor's degree from Michigan State University and a J.D. and master's degree in public policy from the University of Michigan.

ANNE MARIE WEBER-MAIN is Assistant Professor and Associate Director of Research in Family Medicine and Community Health at the University of Minnesota. Since 1998, she has taught scientific writing and been a writing coach and editor for research faculty in the clinical and basic sciences. She received her Ph.D. in chemistry (analytical emphasis) from the University of Minnesota.

JOAN C. WILLIAMS is a Distinguished Professor of Law and Director of the Center for WorkLife Law at UC Hastings College of the Law. She is known for her work on women and economics and work/family issues. She has published widely, including the award-winning Unbending Gender: Why Work and Family Conflict and What to Do About It (Oxford University Press, 1999) and over fifty law review articles. Professor Williams received her bachelor's degree from Yale University, her master's degree in city planning from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and her J.D. from Harvard Law School.