California Tops Nation in Teacher Salaries

Washington, D.C. – California had the nation’s highest average teacher salary for the 2002-03 school year, according to the American Federation of Teachers’ annual teacher salary survey released Thursday.

California came in first in the nation for its 2002-03 average teacher salary, at $55,693, up 2.5 percent from the previous year. California ranked fifth in the nation for its average beginning teacher salary, at $34,805, up 1.8 percent from the previous year. The AFT estimates that California’s average starting salary for the most recent school year, 2003-04, was $35,919.

Regionally, California topped its western neighbors for average teacher salary. Oregon ranked 14th, at $47,463; Nevada was 26th at $41,795; and Arizona was 31st, at $39,955.

Across the country, teachers’ salaries remained relatively stagnant while their share of health benefits rose at all-time rates, making it difficult to attract and keep good teachers at a time when they are increasingly needed, the report said.

Nationally, the 2002-03 average teacher salary, which is the most recent figures available, was $45,771, up 3.3 percent from the previous year, and the average beginning teacher salary was $29,564, up 3.2 percent from the previous year. But AFT’s report noted that teachers’ share of health insurance costs spiked an average 13 percent, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

“Exorbitant health insurance costs are taking an intolerable bite out of already inadequate teacher salaries. Teachers are being asked to do more, shortages persist in the most challenging areas to teach, yet compensation packages are insulting,” said AFT Secretary-Treasurer Edward J. McElroy.

Furthermore, the AFT noted, superintendents’ average salaries are as much as four times higher than teachers’ average pay. “States and school districts are crying poverty when it comes to teachers’ pay yet somehow find money for extravagant administrator salaries,” McElroy said.

After California, Michigan had the second-highest average teacher salary for 2002-03, at $54,020. South Dakota had the nation’s lowest average teacher salary, at $32,414.

Alaska led the nation with the highest average beginning teacher salary for 2002-03, at $37,401. Montana had the nation’s lowest average beginning teacher salary, at $23,052.
